WE MEMBERS of the yearbook staff have chosen certain schools of contemporary art as the basis for our annual of 1950. In this book you will find what we hope to be faithful representations of such abstract art forms as surrealism and cubism.

We cannot easily tell you what each of these words means since they were probably names invented in some cheap cafe in Paris over the second bottle of Tokay with an eye fixed on a not-too-receptive public. But we do know that the artists such as Dale and Bracque are members of that group which broke away from convention and expressed itself in a new way. These people achieved their new effects because they were first-rate craftsmen and they had no further need for mere technique. They did not paint life as it was seen by others, but rather they painted as they interpreted it and felt it to be. Try to understand them, because they are revealing glimpses of the world you now are making.

The graduating class of 1950 has been subjected to the mill. They have learned techniques and methods. They, too, shall become master craftsmen able to rise above the technical details. In time, it is hoped, they will even rise far enough to build an atomic world which is safe for all society — a world complete and secure in its existence.

FALLSINGTON PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. Forrest C. Jobes

Mr. Medill Bair

Mr. A. VanWagenen

Top: Mr. Forrest C. Jobes, though very busy as a company executive, still finds time to serve as an able president of the School Board. Middle: Mr. Medill Bair attacks the job of regional superintendent with enthusiasm and industry. Below: Mr. VanWagenen, also an executive, untiringly acts as president of the Parent-Teacher Association.

THE THREE MEN pictured on this page represent the three groups involved in providing this area with a school system that is fast taking the lead in Bucks County.

Chief of these groups is the School Board, the work of which this year has consisted principally in spending time, effort, and money trying to work through red tape connected with building a new school. Fortunately, the end seems in sight and Pennsbury can hope very shortly to occupy new quarters.

Working just as hard is the school administrative body, charged with the bettering of instruction as well as the smooth, efficient running of the school. This year in-service training under Dr. S. Butterweck, of Temple University, and special workshop days were provided for teachers in aiding them to set up a curriculum to meet Pennsbury's needs. In addition, outstanding coordination among all schools and personnel groups was maintained. Three cheers for these excellent leaders.

Exceptional mention must be made of the third body, the Parent-Teacher Association which has accomplished much. Among their worthwhile enterprises have been the awarding of two scholarships, the providing of a banquet for top-ranking students, the re-organizing of bus routes, and the instituting of study groups to help parents to understand children's problems. Who can believe that this group has only been in existence two years?

Pennsbury is surely fortunate in having such interested adults working for its welfare!

This symbolic and abstract painting depicts the artist's conception of the faculty. Represented by mature full-grown branches, the teachers plant their knowledge in the minds of students symbolized in the form of a young sapling. In addition to knowledge, instructors impart guidance and understanding. The latter contributions are embodied in the form of leaves.

Top: Students in a foods class start preparing a dinner in the new home economics kitchen. Middle: a biology group prepares some agar-agar solutions. Below: a senior English group listens to Macbeth on records. Helen LaBeur is getting ready to play another disc.

SEPTEMBER 13, 1949, arrived and 568 students tripped out to start classes where they had left off last June. We say "left off" because this year's sections all had met the last week of last year for Orientation Days — days when students met their new teachers and actually began the work of the new year. Such days were an innovation that made for a smooth beginning of 1949-50.

Among the new courses open to students this year were those in family relations, consumer education, salesmanship, and junior science. Continued was the popular course in Driver Education.

In the junior division (grades 7, 8, and 9) core type of instruction was instituted. Various subjects such as English and history were correlated to a certain extent as they were taught by the same teachers to the same students. It is expected that such instruction will be retained but intensified.

In the senior division (grades 10, 11, and 12) socialized procedure making use of committee work, field trips, projects, panels, and such, was emphasized. Of special interest to the division was the obtaining of a home across from the Fallsington building as a Home Economics cottage. Both boys and girls were utilized in repairing, furnishing, and decorating the home.

It is also expected that the full time program in shop and home-making, newly introduced into the Yardley building this year, will continue.

CUBISM—the breaking down of a surface into geometric shapes—served as the inspiration for the opposite artistic study. The subject depicted is a young girl seated at a desk. Looking closely, you will see how the girl's face and clothing, the desk, and the background have been reduced to their cubistic forms to make a pleasing design.

PAINTINGS

Samuel DiNatale, Senior Class President.

President DiNatale leads one of those worthwhile, though many times highly excited, class meetings while officers Gloria Pursell (secretary), Frank Ferraro (vice-president), and Lydia Wiegand (treasurer) sit in the front seats.

Senior sponsors Mrs. L. Edwards and Miss P. Ronkin deserve a real "thank you" for their patience and help. Believe us, the seniors were in need of both.

Another group of junior rooters watch the Boys vs. Girls hockey game. Evidently something hilarious just occurred. Right, Mabel?

Detailed Canvases of 1951

Things the juniors will long remember: Receiving their dreamy rings (class rings, of course) . . . putting some previously carefree people to work (their class officers) . . . whirling under the bountiful cornucopia to the lilting strains of McKnight's orchestra . . . performing in Mr. Bachman's assembly program (so talented they were, you know) . . . settling down to honest work (had to give the teachers a break some of the time) . . . strutting the boards in that magnificent performance of "The Bat" (could it have been otherwise?) . . . preparing breakfast for the mighty seniors (too bad the toast burned and the eggs became soggy!) . . . and finally strolling through the arbors of the Langhorne Country Club on June 2 (the night of the Junior Prom.)

President Eddie Kemble presides at a sophomore class meeting while M. Danko (secretary) takes minutes and R. Becker (treasurer) sits by.

A group of sophomores board Mr. Dougherty's bus. Can there be any doubt that it is 3:16 P. M.?

Secondary Sketches 1952, 1953

The 9A section, housed in the Fallsington Building, trip downstairs for English class with Mrs. Edwards in Room 15.

Another group of '52'ers applaud vigorously at the close of an assembly program at which scientist Paul Sloane demonstrated many experiments with liquid air. Remember his swallowing the stuff?

Primary Sketches

1954, 1955

Things other underclassmen won't forget: The uncertainty the sophomores felt about their new teachers . . . the speedy preparations for the Sophomore Hop, October 28 . . . dancing about the colorful Christmas tree at the Sophomore Christmas Ball . . . the bristling speech of Mr. Ingraham at the Freshman Hobo Hop . . . the long-awaited superior feeling of being ninth grade upper-classmen at Yardley . . . the reins-holding of Mrs. Carfagno, Mr. Bachman, Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Baldwin, and Miss Vella . . . the leadership of Freshman Officers R. Bray (President), H. Briggs (Vice-President), R. Guzikowski (Secretary), and J. Roberts (Treasurer) . . . the lonesomeness of grade 9A (housed in the Fallsington building) for the rest of their classmates . . . the guidance program in the junior division . . . the eighth grade homeroom teachers . . . the invitations to Mr. Ingraham's Sardi's at Yardley and Mr. Greene's Workshop at Fallsington (otherwise known as "brigs") . . . and finally that wide-eyed "lost" look of all seventh graders back in September.

A . . . Classes 9B and 9C; B . . . Classes 8A and 8D; C . . . Classes 8B and 8C; D . . . Classes 7A and 7B (one-half section); E . . . Classes 7C and 7B (one-half section).

1. B. Briggs, quietest boy; 2. D. Bowman, quietest girl; 3. R. Morgan, best-dressed boy; 4. J. MacSherry, best-dressed girl; 5. B. Hibbs, best boy athlete and most manly in build; 6. G. Pursell, best girl athlete; 7. D. Grimes, best dancer; 8. A. Buckalew, girl most likely to succeed; 9. R. Anderson, most handsome; 10. G. Willard, prettiest girl; 11. F. Ferraro, wittiest boy; 12. H. LaBeur, wittiest girl; 13.

EXTRA-CURRICULAR activities were in full swing here at Pennsbury. They took up the club period time, which was the last period in the day, the time immediately after school, and sometimes evenings.

The majority of clubs accepted from twenty-five to thirty members; so it was not always possible to get into a club of one's first choice. But for variety, there was no question. Some of the clubs, the names of which suggest the nature of their programs, were as follows: Gift, Commercial, Debate, Yearbook, Newspaper, Photography, Science, Drama, Boys' and Girls' Athletic, Projectionist, Driver Training, Stagecraft, Library, Auto Mechanics, Art, Cheerleading, Model Aircraft, Plastic Arts, Boys' and Girls' Chorus, and Band.

In addition, a vast interscholastic sports program was carried on. There were hockey, football, basketball, softball, baseball, and swimming teams. Most of these squads could use the facilities at the Makefield Elementary School (made necessary because neither the Fallsington nor Yardley buildings have gymnasiums), but some groups had to go elsewhere. The boys' basketball teams had to travel to Parker School in Trenton for practices and for games, while the girls' swimming teams had to go to the Trenton Y.W.C.A.

Mention must also be made of the plays and dances. Both the seniors and juniors each presented a drama. Unfortunately the yearbook deadline was too soon for us to catch the junior production. All the classes as well as the Parent-Teacher Association presented many dances throughout the months. There was the Senior Ball, the Junior Prom, the Sophomore Christmas Ball, the Junior Harvest Hop, the Sophomore Hop, the Freshman Hobo Dance, and the Saturday Night Canteen Dances.

In the vein of SURREALISM, the activities of the school are herewith represented. Using the mask of tragedy, a baseball, a music note, a broken pencil, and a limp palette, the artist has placed these objects in a dream-like fantasy. The placing of the mask on a polished column illustrates the difficulties of reaching heights in drama. The limp palette shows the flexibility in the different media that art utilizes. The reader will also note an eye and a key. The first of these stands for an alert eye of a student, eager to partake of all school experiences; the latter of these, for the key to future opportunities. Note the intense avidity with which the busy ants are clamoring for a chance to touch the key. Completing the symbolism is the face of a limp watch to illustrate that time is flexible, according to how students make use of their talents.

THIS YEAR the Student Council was able to get off to a flying start because elections had been held at the end of the 1949 school year. Those elected to lead the Council were Robert Williams, President; Elwood Fritz, Vice-President; Lucy Ragolia, Secretary, and Samuel DiNatale, Treasurer. At the beginning of this school year nine homeroom representatives were chosen and the Council convened with its advisor, Miss Mary Dwyer, early in September.

The Council sponsored the first dance of the year on Friday, September 18, and then took up the direction of the Saturday Night Canteen that was organized last year. In the meantime, such activities as the Curtis Magazine Campaign and the sale of book covers helped to raise some necessary money. In addition, to retain a record of various activities in picture form, the Council purchased for the Penn-Foto Club a professional flash camera.

These tasks completed, plans were then made for an Alma Mater contest, provision of noon-hour activities, and lengthening of the lunch period.

Student Council representatives take time out to gather around President R. Williams and Sponsor M. Dwyer in the Directors' Room in the new Home Economics cottage. Seated: E. PAINTBRUSH WIELDERS

HAVE YOU EVER worked during a Christmas vacation over a yearbook dummy in an art editor's attic, all the time sipping ginger ale, cookies, and potato chips? After working for five months to build a theme around Pennsbury Manor, after which the school was named, Rhæe Anne Wiese, Mary Crosby, Thom Carroll, and Marge Seymour simply tossed all such labor aside (possible the Greenwich Village atmosphere) and decided that non-objective art would lend itself much more to the "simply marvelous" book that the staff had been promising everyone.

Then followed exciting hours of drawing new sketches, new make-ups, writing copy, labeling pictures, and what have you, all work accomplished at top speed, for the deadline was only a month away.

Just as feverishly under Cornelia Watts, efficient business manager, worked the business staff. Oh, yes, one remembers the special meeting called on January 18 to inject some pep into the ad and subscription campaigns, but one also remembers the number of sales which followed. Truly, industry knew no end.

February 1 — Deadline Day — came, and as knees buckled, heads popped, and tempers grew short, we breathed one request: May the readers not be too critical!

Mr. T. Greene gives last minute instructions to Donald Jones before taking him for the test.

In the autumn there came a time when all Pennsbury students had to choose their clubs. This year in the senior division the large and varied assortment included eighteen organizations. Let's do a flashback over the year to see what some of them contributed.

One of the up and coming clubs was the newly organized Art Club which did much to increase the beauty of the bulletin boards, to publicize, through striking posters, the events of the year, and to provide the backdrops for the various school productions. Probably its biggest contribution was the painting of a Christmas mural — something it is hoped will become traditional. Advisor of this club was Mrs. M. Dickel.

Another newly formed organization was the Pennsbury chapter of the National Honor Society. Made up of twenty-seven students outstanding in scholarship, leadership, service, and character, the group was invested by the Pennington High School Chapter in March. Since the club was just formed as Deadline Day arrived, no knowledge could be gained of its activities.

Boys' and Girls' Athletic Clubs, under the direction of Mr. H. Wycoff and Mrs. H. Smith, respectively, were especially popular. As the names imply, their aim was enjoyment of all kinds of sport.

Another extremely popular organization was Auto Mechanics Club, sponsored by Mr. Greene. Numbering among its members sixty boys, it studied the structure of engines and made periodic inspections of student-driven automobiles.

Making great strides towards becoming a great organization, the Pennsbury Band, under the direction of Mr. A. Wolfe, practiced weekly to make a worthwhile showing at various sports events and school productions. This year for the first time color guards and majorettes were added to the group.

Another new organization, the Secretarial Club, directed by Miss P. Ronkin, had as its aim to learn various opportunities in the field of business.

The harmonizing which could be heard Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays coming from Room 16 was that of the voices of the Boys' and Girls' Chorus, led by Mrs. J. Sturrock, as the groups practiced hard to participate in a Christmas Carol Sing and two operettas.

Just as eager to participate, though somewhat bashful, were the members of the Dancing Club, under Mrs. E. Mitchell. This year the group concentrated on square dances and fox trots. Speaking of dancing, the Dance Band met weekly to learn techniques of dance music playing. Until more experienced, it shied away from engagements.

Busy on Thursdays was the Drama Club, under Mrs. L. Edwards, as it read and dramatized radio plays and worked on stage machinery. Busy throughout the week at all hours was the Driver Training Club which had on roll forty members interested in getting a driver's license as quickly as possible as well as knowing worthwhile information about cars.

Organized for the purpose of book-binding and cataloging, the Library Club, under Mr. W. Ringler, strove earnestly to keep the library in order. Serving the school in another way was the Projectionist Club, sponsored by Mrs. Mitchell. Time after time, its members were called upon to help in making visual aids available.

All-famous became the new camera of the Penn-Foto Club, directed by Mr. Kresbach. Without its aid, many of these pages would be lifeless. All famous, too, became the Pennsburian staff which this year published its newspaper by the photo offset process. Miss C. Vella, Mrs. E. Carfagno, and Miss I. Creagmile acted as advisers.

Lastly, mention is made of the Science Club, under Mr. W. Bachman. Despite the fact that the ceiling of Room 7 was almost pushed upward, the members really performed many interesting experiments. The Gift Club, too, helped its members gain the joy of creating something. Mrs. M. Uhler directed the latter organization.

Charter members of the newly organized chapter of the National Honor Society include: (on floor) M. Stackhouse, R. Hahn, R. Williams, B. Eaton, E. Fritz, A. Grimes, C. McAdoo; (seated) M. Tummin'a, L. Wiegand, C. Watts, I. Metzger, R. A. Wiese, D. Patterson, M. Seymour; (standing) A. Buckalew, M. Crosby, E. McCabe, N. Steward, E. M. Patterson, D. Doan, H. Steward, M. Ragolia, D. Would-be scientists M. Danko, M. Roberts, A. Buckalew, J. Genis, A. Scancella, and E. Reimer perform before Sponsor W. Bachman an experiment in Science Cub. Pouring liquid into the test tube is T. Arnold.

To the music of Pennsbury's own dance band, Dancing Club members dance a fox-trot.

Deeply engrossed in selecting a play to work on are Drama Club members T. Carroll, M. Stout, P. McIntyre, J. Morris, M. Grimley, B. Woods, and M. Crosby.

Examining the model engine in Room 7 while Sponsor T. Greene points out certain features of it are auto mechanics M. Sipler, F. Ferraro, J. Perry, R. Anderson (partially hidden), and J. Maglio.

TIME

Dance time was something looked forward to by all students. Many dances over the year were scheduled. In October, there were the Sophomore Hop and the Hobo dance; in November, the Harvest Hop; in December, the Christmas Ball; in April, the Senior Ball; and in June, the Junior Prom. All but the last two were informal, and at all but the Hobo Dance was there an orchestra. In addition to these class dances, there were Saturday Night Canteen Dances scheduled every other week and sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association. All of these affairs took place at the Makefield School auditorium with the exception of the Junior Prom, which took place at the Langhorne Country Club. Incidentally, this was the first dance held off school premises.

At the receiving line.

On December 9 the senior class presented their play, "We Shook the Family Tree." It was a comedy about a girl, Hildegard, who, afraid that she might not go to the Prom, delivered a speech and because of it got into a lot of trouble. It turned out that she went with Freddie, who usually wore knickers but who this time (by means mostly foul) managed to secure a pair of long trousers.

The cast included R. A. Wiese as Hildegard; M. Crosby, her mother; S. DiNatale, her father; Bob Williams, her older brother; L. Wiegand, her younger sister; T. Carroll, her younger brother; N. Everist, Bob's heart throb; A. Buckalew, her friend; D. Grimes, Freddie Shermer who wore knickers; B. Eaton, Freddie's father; C. Watts, Freddie's mother; and B. Jadlocki, Paige, the brat next door.

Some boys choose the GRIDIRON

In its second year Pennsbury has seen a very much improved football team, a squad that broke even in the League by winning four games, losing the same number, and tying two.

The boys played exceptional ball considering the well-trained opposition which they met. Two of them, Charles Saunders and John Perry, were so outstanding as players that they were selected for all-county teams, while three others, Charles Pagels, Dennis Cavin, and Bill Hibbs, received honorable mention.

Senior Dennis Cavin was the year's captain, who led his team wisely and showed calm, cool judgment in all situations. Taking over next year will be Vince Robinson and Jack Sands as co-captains.

Graduating players who saw action this year included: Sam DiNatale, Bill Hibbs, Bill Briggs, Dennis Gavin, Dick Bullington, Charles Pagels, Harry Glatz, Frank Ferraro, and Bob Williams.

Gathered around Coach H. Wyckoff as he explains a new play are J. Perry, J. Paone, C. Saunders, E. Fritz, J. Brown, R. Peaker, J. Cutchinal, and F. Hunter.

Winning ten games out of nineteen, the Pennsbury varsity five finished an average season. Similarly the junior varsity team ended the year, the wins and losses totaling nine each.

Tough games for the varsity included those with three schools, Mt. Holly, Bristol, and Morrisville. Analyzing the defeats, Pennsbury can attribute the zones before Mt. Holly to extreme height on the part of the opponents; the ones before Bristol to accurate passing and brilliant rebound work on the part of the enemy; and the ones before Morrisville to rugged fighting on the part of the opposing quintet.

High scorers for the year included varsity players Bill Hibbs with 257 points; John Paone with 216 points; Elwood Fritz with 130 points; and junior varsity players Arthur Grimes with 178 points and Granville Mayo with 85 points.

Credit should also be given to John Perry and Charles Saunders, who did a wonderful job of bringing the ball back court to scoring range. Their scrappiness and aggressiveness made them real assets.

Receiving last minute instructions from Coach W. Bachman before playing Morrisville, the J. V. basketball team listen attentively. Kneeling: G. Mayo, J. Morris, A. Grimes, C. Pagels, A. Turner and G. Shepherd. Standing: D. Sacks, P. Loef, E. Kemble and A. Reed.

The senior high girls' hockey team was the first Pennsbury team to win a Bucks County championship cup when they came through this year with two scoreless tie games and no losses. Coach of the team was Mrs. Helene Smith.

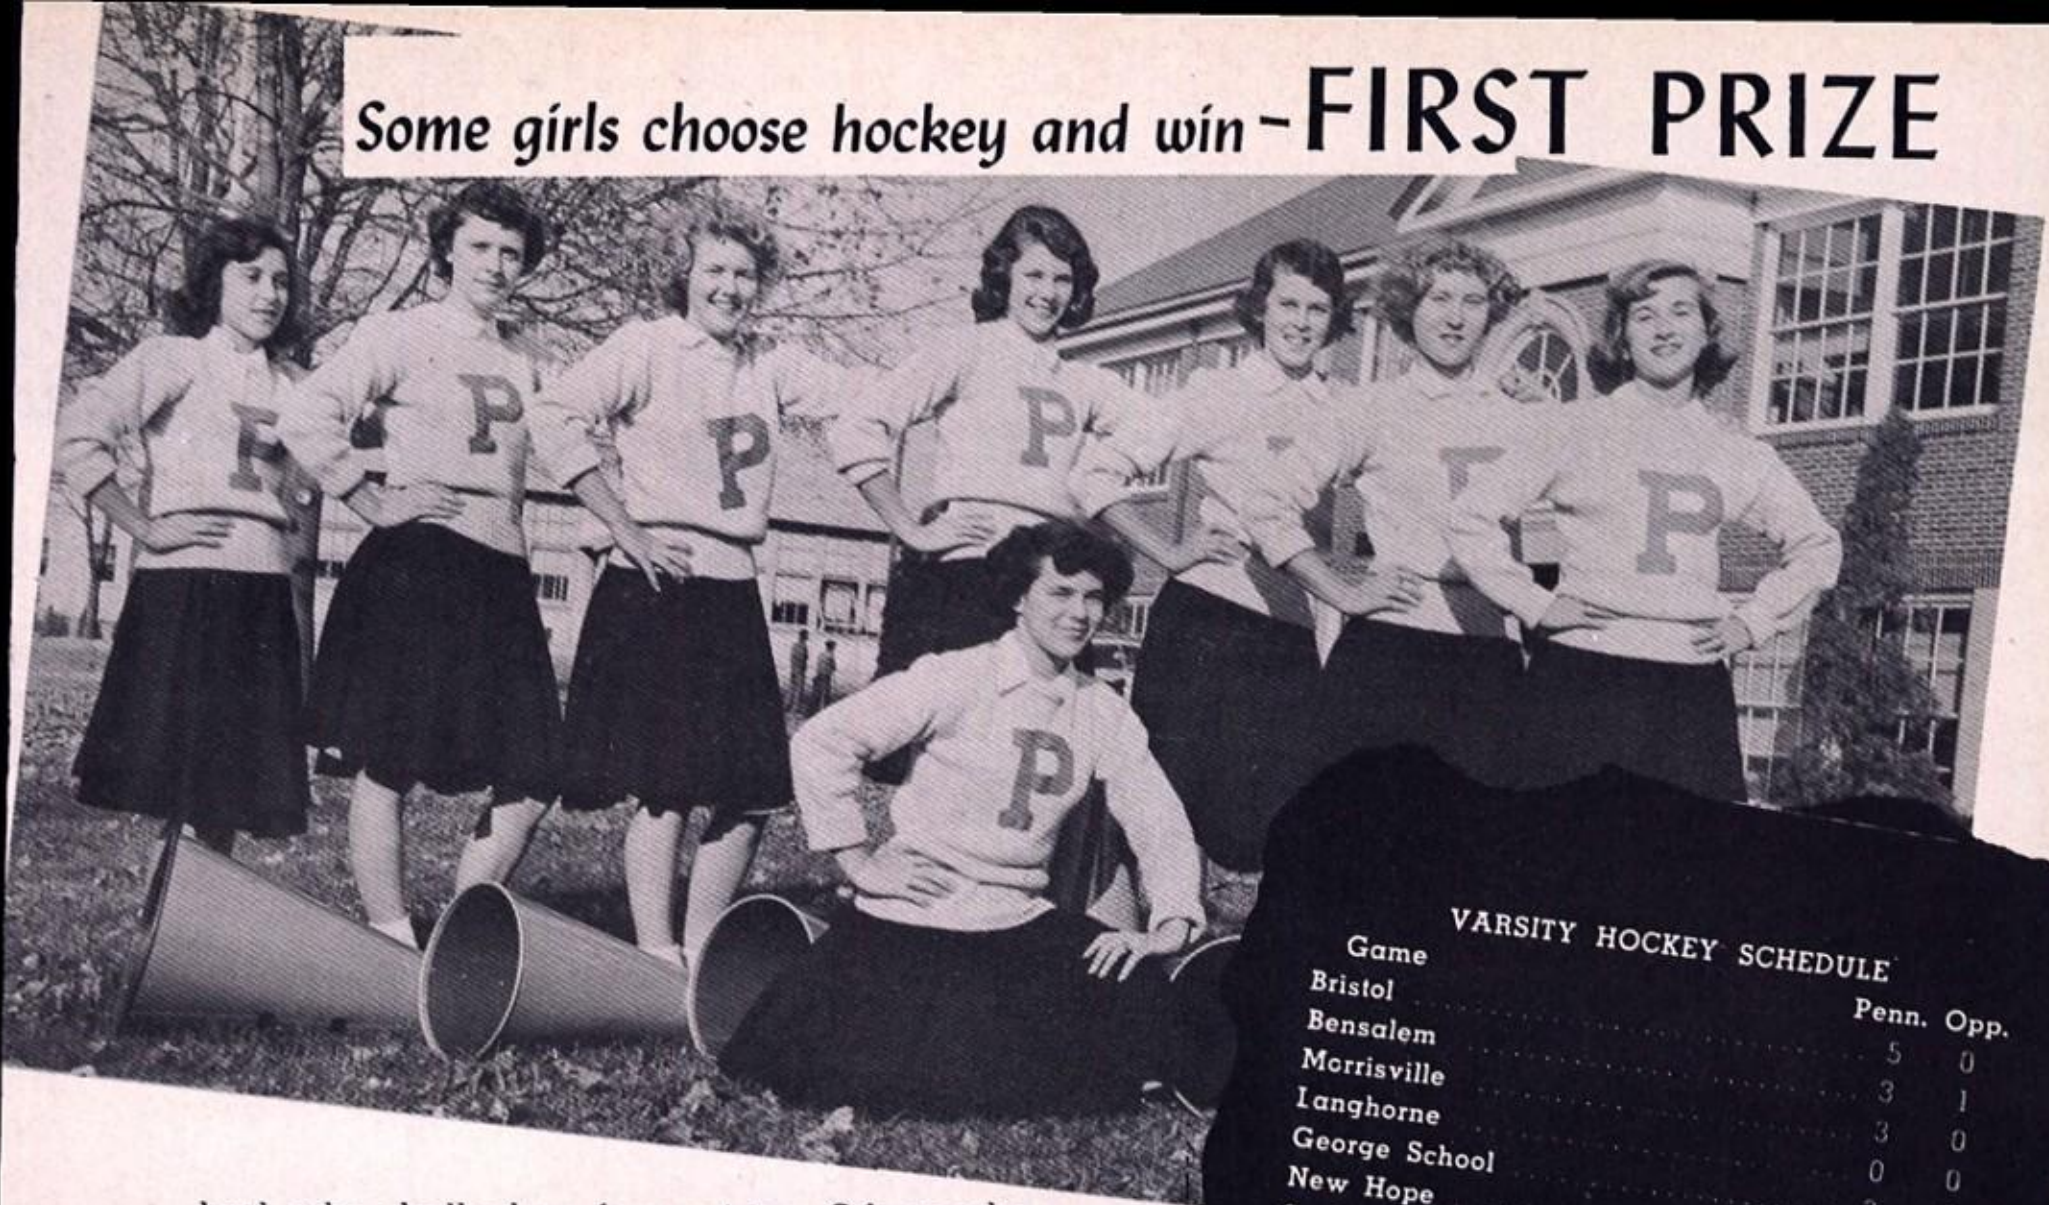

Although this was only the second year for the girls working together, they portrayed excellent playing ability and sportsman-like cooperation. Each girl gave all the support she could.

Among the leading players were Joan MacSherry, who scored seven points, and Gail Willard, who chalked up four points. Others who scored were Erla McCabe, Myra Kennedy, Jane Coulton, Gloria Pursell, Jeannette Hibbs, and Alfreda Szolack. The fullbacks and goalie also should be commended for their teamwork in defensive playing.

Cheering them and all other school teams on to victory was an organization that has worked hard to rouse pep and spirits — the Cheerleaders. Under Miss K. Vella and Mrs. E. Jakob the girls have organized some new cheers which took the rooters by storm. Captain this year was Jane Coulton.

A black and white photograph of a stack of books, a silver scroll, and a card on a tray. The books are stacked vertically, with the top one slightly offset. A silver scroll is unrolled and lies to the left of the books. A card with text is placed in front of the books, resting on a silver tray. The background is a dark, textured surface.
